Followed by a talk by Emily Cuff “Natural Flood Management in Ottery St. Mary”

Devon Wildlife Trust has been leading on a Natural Flood Management (NFM) project in Ottery St Mary, East Devon in partnership with Devon County Council and Environment Agency. The aim has been to slow the flow of water above the town in order to reduce the flood risk to properties. The work carried out will also benefit mammals and other wildlife. The project has carried out different work across the land and in the streams to slow the flow of water, catch soil and debris and to encourage water to soak into the ground rather than running over the surface. Work has included adding woody debris to the ditches, improving soil health, planting trees, returning hedgerows to the landscape and increasing the size and diversity of a local pond. We are monitoring the changes in the catchment to record the impacts of the work
